Water District meeting report

By Virginia Parke

A flood of very concerned public response washed over the Board of Directors at the November 21 meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. The deluge was prompted by the Board's decision to protest applications filed by Carmel Valley well-users for increases in their water allocations.

Apparently the group represented six small well-users that had signed an agreement with the MPWMD to support the proposed new Los Padres Dam project in exchange for certain water rights guarantees. According to one well-user, the Board's action was considered as a breach of that agreement. MPWMD's position was defended with the statement that the filed protests only represent a way for MPWMD to become a party to the water rights negotiations. A member of the protest group voiced the need to clean up any misunderstanding. "What am I suppose to do? I do not want to sue and impair the dam project efforts," he stated.

The meeting continued with reports by the general manager on the October 26 Technical Advisory Committee Meeting. This was followed by the attorney's report focusing on the Water Rights Hearing before the State Water Resources Control Board and the directors' report on the ACWA Steelhead Task Force Meeting October 18 where a report will emerge by January 1, 1995. MPWMD went on to approve the Kovacevich application to amend the water distribution system permit formerly held by Carmel Valley Mutual Water Company and now operated by Cal-Am. A Board member questioned the low fee amount listed for hydrogeologic study. A recommendation was made to adjust this fee to 1994 levels.

The issue of reinvestment of water saving from retrofits program was held over to be addressed at the December meeting. Two items were pulled from the consent calendar. They were the district reserve allocations for Harmony Home School and a proposed contract amendment with Don Alley for studies relating to the new Los Padres Dam. The remainder of the calendar was approved which included the October budget expenditures of $229,200.87. Additional reports were given covering monthly allocations Carmel River Fishery, Cal-Am production, water conservation program, Paralta Well project and the monthly Cal-Am sales report for October. The next regular meeting of the Board is scheduled for Monday, December 19, 1994 at 7:30 PM in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

Practicing the art of protecting rare habitats

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Pebble Beach Company began to propagate and protect the endangered plant species of the Del Monte Forest sand dunes in 1986 in conjunction with the development of Spanish Bay. Much of the habitat for these endangered species was destroyed during sand mining operations prior to the development of Spanish Bay. Those few areas left undisturbed, called remnant dunes, were not disturbed during construction and are designated endangered species habitat and will remain undeveloped and protected.

The goal of the endangered species program is to develop a self-sustaining population that can eventually survive without human intervention. To do this, the Pebble Beach Company protects the habitat from development and pedestrian disturbance through fencing the areas off and posting signs identifying the area as sensitive. In addition, the endangered species are grown and replanted to increase population numbers.

The three species being propagated are Trestrom's Lupin, Sand Gilian and Menzies Wallflower. Seeds are collected at the dunes and then germinated in the greenhouse where the plants are grown in cells prior to being moved outside. When the plants are taken out of the greenhouse they are deprived of water to toughen them up to acclimate them to the conditions that will be experienced in their eventual home in the sand dunes. Some plants are lost at this stage but the strongest, most drought resistant plants survive and propagate.

Trestrom's Lupin has had the most success. The lupin is now propagating itself although the Pebble Beach Company continues to facilitate the process. Sand Gilian has been the most troublesome as it is an annual and has a short life span. Over the past few years the Pebble Beach Company has experimented with scarring the seeds to mimic sand dune activity which has increased the success rate. Currently, the Pebble Beach Company is working with the Department of Fish and Game to determine if direct seeding of scarified seeds is more Creativity is ageless. Just ask any one of the talented exhibitors at SASI ART (Senior Art Society, Inc.) located in the Barnyard shopping center. Their grand opening November 21 drew supporters and buyers who agreed. Director Drina Norman pointed out that one of the goals of the gallery is to produce enough income to provide a small framing facility for senior artists.

Some of the local artists now showing are

Charles Scardina, Marjorie Van Peski and Betty Rees. The gallery also accepts estate art pieces on consignment.

Among those enjoying the exhibition were Dorothy Thomas, Hilda and Wayne Robeback, John DesForge, Cathy Bramlet, Bob Beety, Nancy Whitacre, John and Eileen Thompson. Assisting Drina in running The gallery are Bobbi Meyer, Faye Zylka and John Atkinson.

Giving is timeless. Just ask Randy and Charlene Randazzo of Carmel Village Market. They have been providing Thanksgiving dinner for Rippling River residents for 14 years. Over the years the local Kiwanis club and various individuals have gathered to support this project. The list of volunteers is impressive and deserves to be named. Those donating include: Allo and Shirley Heubener, Web and Alice Buckhman, Gene Erner, McPatel, Mike Thatcher, John Bird, Lew Gardiner, Pat Hannon, Irv Hartford, Flo Williams, Mrs. Highland, Lew Harbin, Dasty Eaton, A.J. Slotter, and Peggy Crosby. Serving the dinner were: Bob Meadows and friend Betty, Maurice Lorella, Julie Corbet, Bruce Michel, president of the Kiwanis and spouse Pam, Larry McCann, Bob Akins and friend Patrick, Rosemaire Barger, Gary Tate, Dick and Nancy Dahlinger. Rev. Bob Tarr gave the invocation.

Enjoying the delicious dinner were residents and their guests: Audry Cowan, Adina Garza Pena, Marge Albee, Ellerin Mathinsen, Edith Sonne, Ralph Barrera, Kenneth Bizzini, Walter Wilson and the Bridges clan, Rus, Bob, Jessica and Jennifer.

FUN IN THE SUN

Dave Lyon

Santa Claus Is Coming to Town... like THIS Saturday, dudes! Yes, gang, it's REALLY that time again... the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center is very pleased and proud to present the 36th (can you believe that?...) annual Santa's Fly-In and Parade! This is a very popular valley tradition!

EVERYONE is hereby invited to bring the kids out to meet (the real) Santa and Mrs. Claus when they arrive via private aircraft at 11 a.m. on Saturday, the 10th of December at the Carmel Valley Airfield. There, Santa will be greeted by hundreds of children of all ages, as well as the unusual collection of fire trucks, floats, old cars, horses, kids on bikes, clowns, three wise men, and my two golden retrievers running amuck with felt antlers (I promised them they could; they've been so good this year...).

Wearing the honorary top-hat this year will be Parade Grand Marshalls Dean and Josie Diaz from the very popular Plaza Linda, celebrating 31 years here in Carmel Valley Village.

KIDS: Don't forget about the "Best Decorated Bike Contest," a very important part of every Santa's Fly In. Kids with decorated bikes should meet at the airfield no later than 10:30 on the morning of the Fly-In. Decorated bikes will be given their own spot in the parade, and the judging will take place afterwards at the Community Center. So... get out the Christmas lights and whatever else you can hang or strap on your bike (a moosehead?) and meet us Saturday morning.

After greeting all the kids at the airfield, Santa and his crew will be whisked via parade through the Carmel Valley Village to the Community Youth Center on Ford Rd, where he will personally visit with each youngster, hear Christmas wishes from all, and maybe even answer a few questions. (Is there baseball in heaven?) Photos of your child with Santa will be available for a small fee. (Hey, Santa don't come cheap!)

REMEMBER: the rain date for the Fly-In will be Sunday, the 11th; and if it's still raining then, the next scheduled date will be Saturday, the 17th.

Also at the Community Center during the Fly-In celebration will be a crafts fair, face-painting for the kids, game booths and yummy treats for everyone.

Due to overwhelming demand, the famous CVCYC "Moosehead eggnog" will not return this year, but will soon be available by the pint at Randy's Market. All proceeds from the sale of this popular local beverage will go into a trust fund, established to benefit survivors of last year's Fly-In.

A big thank you goes out to all the community volunteers who helped provide race support for the Community Center's involvement with SCRAM this season. On Thursday, December 1st, the CVCYC was presented with a check from the Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula for over $1,500, to be used for expanding programs through the Community Center. Special thanks to CVCYC crew members Tim Dorreck and Tony Glanville, and to Carmel Valley Park District Board

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

First, the good news, if you live in, or own property in Monterey County, especially in the Salinas Valley. After roughly four years of pleading, arguing, and threatening, I got the State Water Resources Control Board to notice the Salinas Valley's salt water intrusion problem, and start acting on it.

The bad news is that it is a little too late to start long drawn out surveys (perhaps five years or more) to find out just who is using so much water, after which the court battles begin, likely another five years. The Pacific Ocean's King Neptune couldn't care less about lengthy surveys and court battles, while his ocean enjoys itself running downhill into our drained supply aquifers. So, for all practical purposes, I wasted a lot of time arguing with public officials, here and in Sacramento, and wasted a small amount of pocket change on stamps and envelopes. The moral of the story is if at first you don't succeed, and nobody else cares, give up.

Is Ross Perot coming back? We now have to try to align with political parties the same way we have to pick candidates in the voting booths, try to decide which party might be the lesser of two evils, or at least be the most likely to give our nation's future a high priority. Just when I was about to re-register as a Democrat, big business got into the act with NAFTA, a continuation of the famous "Reagan give the store away" policy, and in case that isn't enough to destroy our national employment statistics, we now have the world-wide GATT deal coming up, with everybody, especially aspiring presidential candidates, trying to get footholds on the band wagon.

I can understand a buyer for a big importing company going overseas to get merchandise to sell in our department stores. Our clothing and shoe factories simply cannot compete with those in China, El Salvador, Mexico, Indonesia, ad infinitum.

Roughly 90 percent of our shoes and clothing comes from overseas, while our trade deficit worsens, along with our unemployment statistics. Did our country or our people do something terrible, to deserve being sold down the river so shabbily? Please O Great White Fathers Who Art in Washington, either fully explain why you are doing this or at least, resign. Maybe the various White House and Congress job descriptions need revising, so there will be no confusion about what the priorities should be.

FROM WHERE I STAND

Lee Phelps

The answer to all problems: Pass another law.

That's the rallying cry of brain-damaged liberals, and the Political "government can do anything" types they support. Take for instance, a new Georgia law requiring schools to suspend or expel students who bring weapons to school. Known as "zero tolerance," the law provides for no exceptions whatever. So, during the past several months:

- A seven year old girl took a water pistol to school, and was suspended.

- An Atlanta elementary school girl was suspended for taking a knife to school. To carve some other student up? No. To help the teacher cut cookies, for her classmates.

- A seventh-grader was suspended for having a pocket knife in her jeans that she'd forgotten to take out and leave at home following her return from a camping trip.

- And a 17 year old girl currently is awaiting trial and faces up to four years in prison...for what? For taking to school as a "show-and-tell" project some African Artifacts. Among which was a ceremonial knife. Amazingly, the student had asked and been given permission from her teacher ahead of time to take the items (including the ceremonial knife). No matter. Charges have not been dropped. Says the principal: "my hands are tied."

There's an old saying that goes "the road to hell is paved with good intentions." Nowhere is that truism more apparent than when otherwise fairly intelligent people set out to change society, and human behavior, by passing some rigid and unbending new law. They may have the best of intentions, but they forget one simple fact: The Law of Unintended Consequences.

Most laws are so poorly written to begin with that no two law enforcement officers, lawyers or Judges can or will agree on how the law should be first interpreted, and then applied in any given circumstance of situation. If a law can be misinterpreted, and its application result in a miscarriage of justice, or as in these cases an absolutely idiotic outcome. Trust me: That's what will happen.

One year, at least, out of every three years the governing body of a political entity is in session--be it City, County, State, or the Congress--should be devoted exclusively to first reviewing all existing laws, then abolishing at least half of them before another new law may be enacted.

That's how it seems, from where I stand.

LETTERS to the Editor

Editor, CV Sun:

What can explain a story about Pebble Beach garbage--Sumitomo/PBC's recycling project--making the front page of the Carmel Valley Sun? Then, I should not be amazed by what a multimillion $$$ PR budget, backed by one of the world's largest, foreign-owned banks, can buy. I should be more amazed at how much garbage all those Lodge and Inn guests, tourists, and "special event" guests can generate.

Actually, I commend PBC on its recycling effort. But, I admonish the Peninsula community NOT to be diverted by Sumitomo/PBC's recent environmental compassion. Remember, the Company's real aim is to sell a development of more than one square mile--the size of Carmel--including 16 subdivisions and a golf course (where one does not belong) to you, me, the County, and the Coastal Commission. The "bad" news outweighs the "good" for all of us on this ambitious development.

Back to the recycling effort, I seriously doubt, and I believe author Elizabeth Cowley should, too, Sumitomo/PBC's assertion that this has actually reduced "large vehicle trips...by over 50%." Where's the proof? Overall, traffic, including large trucks, has increased beyond road capacity in recent years under the Company's new ownership. And, this all comes BEFORE the "buildout" proposal with no new arterial roads planned.

Don't be fooled by all the garbage. Pun intended.

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

We thought you might want to print this;

t'was bit before Christmas and all down the route, every deer sign stood naked,
and none with a snout.
But what to my wondering eyes should appear?
A daughter and dad
looking for reindeer and the daughter said
"Dad we should put the nose here and turn these plain deer into Christmas cheer"

And down at Caltrans
there arose such a clatter
My Dad and I didn't know what was the matter.

We are not trying to make a wrong right.
We're just wishing you Christmas cheer each and every night.

The Christmas Pranksters

Entrepreneur Ann Conneau and her family.

A blend of health, love and good taste...

Annie Conneau, a long - time Carmel Valley resident went from being a waitress, to having her own catering business, to starting (along with he husband, Jeff) the ANN -HOW FOODS line of oriental dressings and sauces. And, in her "spare" time, starting a family ("miracle" child, Laura, now 4), and competing in foot - races all up and down the Pacific Coast. Energy? You Betcha! Determination? Even more so!

This is a lady to be reckoned with. It all started back in 1983 while employed as a waitress at the Carmel Valley Ranch. The Golf and the Tennis clubs first started using her ANN-HOW Oriental Dressing; it was so popular, the hotel dining room also featured it. The Original Oriental Dressing was also very popular with her catering business customers, so she decided to go into full-time production in 1984. A lite Oriental Dressing and Habachi BBQ Sauce were later added, and orders have really taken off. Each month, about 125 cases are sold just around the Peninsula.

The ANN HOW line can be found in almost all gourmet foods and specialty shops throughout the peninsula, as well as the major supermarkets, and in many stores throughout the West Coast. Each product able in 8 ounce bottles. Gift Packs (one bottle of each) are now available for the upcoming holiday season. Gallons are sold to various restaurants and caterers. Golf pro Lee Trevino orders a case at a time, and Annie even ships dressing to Olympic gold medal marathon winner Joan Benoit Samuelson in Maine!

A real family business, everyone is involved. Annie does the marketing and overseas production; husband Jeff acts as bookkeeper and overseas quality control, both make deliveries, and daughter Laura is featured in many of the ads and promos. Annie's Dad, Bruce Springer, suggested the ANN-HOW name, and the slogan, "Oh, Wow! ANN-HOW!"

Meanwhile, Annie runs approximately 40 miles per week, alternating speed workouts and long distance in her training regimen. She ran the Big Sur Marathon in 1989, and has this past year been busy qualifying at various distances for USA Track and Field Association's All American Award for Excellence in the National Masters Program.

She has qualified in the one mile, 1,500 meter, 3,000 meter, 5 Kilometer and 10 Kilometer distances--Quite a deal for a busy lady of 38. Also this year, she has WON her division in the Toro Park SkyClimb 5K, the Together With Love 10K, the Santa Cruz Track Club 800 meter, and the Los Gatos Mile. In the Wharf to Wharf 6-Miler Race, she was the 70th female across the finish line--not bad when you consider there were over 6,000 women of all-ages competing!

The tale of a man with bicycles hanging from the roof

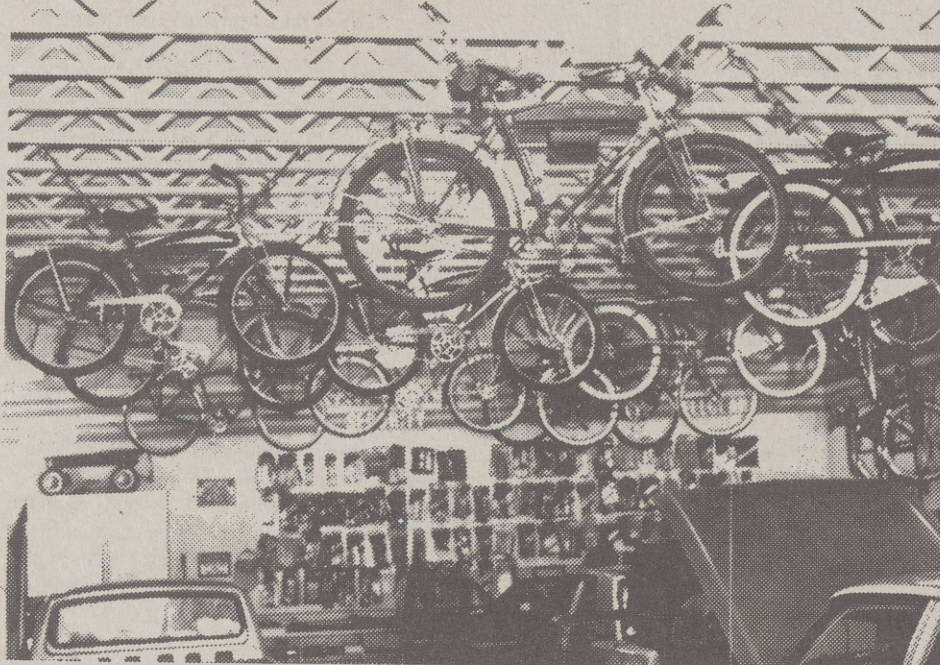

By Virginia Parke

Say bicycle to Bob Nichols. Go ahead, "bicycle."

His salt and pepper beard twitches, his blue eyes light up and his voice becomes lyrical as words tumble out faster than a kid late for school can pedal. Bob jumps out of this time into the world of vintage bicycles.

"There is something about them that intrigues me. I love to take them apart and restore them to their original state. The bikes of today are skeletons compared to a Western Flyer or a J.C. Higgins. They have flesh. They were designed to engage the imagination," he exclaims. "You were not just riding a bike, you were flying an airplane. Each one has its own personality."

"The old ones were built with quality. You can feel the manufacturer's sense of pride by the attention to detail. I can feel the energy of the people that assemble these bikes. I can see that someone really cared about what they did. There was one manufacturer that made side cars. It was called a "Pat Side Car." It hooked on to any bike. The only way a kid could get one was to save up coupons that they had to work for," he relates. "It made you feel as if you were riding a motorcycle."

Some of the more than 200 bicycles in Bob's collection hang from the roof at the family auto stereo business's installation department.

Bob and his spouse, Sharon, have owned and operate Kar Tunes in Seaside for the last 25 years. They install car stereos and alarms. "Sharon runs that business while I focus on Vintage Bicycles," he relates. "She enjoys administration more than I do. I am a craftsman. I enjoy bringing a piece of history back to life."

They have lived in Carmel Valley for 22 years. Bob first became interested in bicycles 15 years ago and started collecting and restoring six years ago. He stores most of his collection at the Kar Tunes installation shop, hanging the bicycles from the ceiling. "I guess you could call them our "bicycle angles," he jokes.

Bob is now into finding bicycles that are as close to original condition as possible. "It is hard, many bikes were collected and melted down for the metal during W.W.II. What is nice about the originals is that they usually have dings, so you do not worry about scratching them. "You ride these old timers and you get a real work out. They were built out of steel and can weigh up to 70 pounds. Every time I take one out someone always stops me and wants to reminisce. They still stir imaginations today."

"I am expanding Vintage Bicycles to include finding old models for other collectors. I have people call me worldwide," he states.

Bob is now in bicycle heaven. Whenever the phone rings, it is more than likely it will be someone who says "bicycle" to Bob.

WILLIAM ERNEST JORGENSEN

William Ernest Jorgensen, 81, of Carmel, a retired science librarian and contributor to many social and political causes, died of heart failure Tuesday at the Central Coast Hospice.

Born October 13, 1913 in Herber City, Utah, he was the sixth of seven children. He is survived by his wife of nearly 55 years, Margaret B. (Peggy) Jorgensen; a sister, Helen Orr of Tucson, Arizona; his children Robert Ernest Jorgensen and Mollie Ann Jarrow, both of Santa Cruz; Barry Steven Jorgensen of Palo Alto, and eight grandchildren, seven from Santa Cruz, and one from San Diego. He and his wife Peggy have made their home in Carmel since 1984.

He was educated at the University of Idaho, where he received the Phi Beta Kappa award in his junior year, graduating Summa Cum Laude in 1938 and attended the University of California, Berkeley, receiving a certificate in Librarianship in 1940. Immediately upon graduation he became a librarian at Oregon State. While employed there he earned a Master's degree in 1942, designing the new Engineering Library as his thesis, and receiving the Phi Kappa Phi award.

During World War II he served as a Navy officer at Pearl Harbor and Washington DC. Following the war he became founding director of the research library at the Naval Electronics Laboratory in San Diego, a position he held for 28 years, until his retirement to Del Mar in 1974.

In Carmel with his wife Peggy, he was a charter member and later a board member of the New Forum, and was active in what was originally Beyond War. He enjoyed the many activities of the Carmel Foundation.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. on December 10 at the Unitarian Universalist Church of the Monterey Peninsula, 490 Aguajito Rd, Carmel, followed by a reception.

The family suggests that in lieu of flowers, memorial contributions be sent to the Carmel Foundation, the Unitarian Universalist Church, or the American Civil Liberties Union of Monterey County.

REAL ESTATE Rand Smith

The definition of insanity is doing the same thing, the same way, over and over again, while expecting different results each time.

Take golf. You look down the fairway, hope the ball goes that way, swing, then watch it dribble somewhere on its own. You're disappointed but you try it again, filled with renewed hope. You look down the fairway, hope the ball goes that way, swing, then watch it dribble somewhere on its own. You're disappointed. You try it again. You are insane.

Insanity is normal in real estate.

Here's what happens: an agent gets the final signature on a contract to sell a home. Every time this occurs, the agent is excited. He or she puts the sale "on the board," (usually a chalkboard in the office with the monthly activity displayed), then stands back and admires it.

Then it's a call to the agent representing the other client to say, "Okay, it's a done deal. Let's make this one a smooth transaction, OK?" Of course, the other agent agrees, while putting the sale on his board.

Everybody is happy, but it doesn't stay that way. And when the mood changes, agents get frustrated. The anxiety level rises, and the only thing that would truly make agents happy is for this deal to close and go away, so they could move on with a new one.

Of course, they believe the new one will be easier. And when the next sale is made, they are excited again.

Does the mood always change? Yes, it does. Some people might think I'm cynical. Some people might claim that when they bought or sold their home, it was truly a pleasant experience. Some sellers might say they got everything they wanted. Some buyers might brag that they got the deal of the year.

Some agents might boast that their transactions are always smooth, and the homes they sell never have defects. Some brokers might claim that their agents are well balanced, and devoid of frustration and anxiety.

Some lenders might say that they are experienced enough to anticipate and solve any problem that could jeopardize a sale. Some appraisers never over or under value a home. Some home inspectors don't panic the buyer, or miss a crucial flaw in the property. Some pest control companies always finish the work on time. Some title companies never let a detail hold up a sale.

Sometimes no one has a problem, but not often.

One of the biggest reasons real estate is doomed to remain an insane business is because it has to be re-invented with every sale.

Obviously the buyer and seller are different every time, and their dispositions alone might be enough to turn the whole transaction topsy-turvy. But the real problem is the other parties to the sale change too. The agents are different. The lender, appraiser, pest and home inspection companies, title officers, insurance agents are also different on each deal.

Sure, they might all be outstanding professionals in their own fields, but they all have their own way of doing business.

What is the consequence of this? Imagine a basketball team that played every game with new players and a new coach against a different team. Prescription for chaos?

One approach many agents use to help cure the lunacy is to develop a "team" of professionals that are used with each of their sales.

Unfortunately, an agent can't require a client to choose their particular lender or home inspector, etc. The buyer or seller might know or trust someone else who is better than the company being recommended.

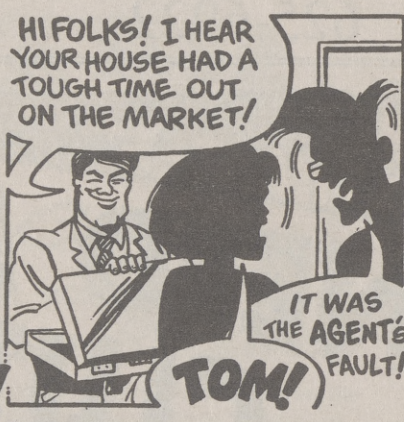

These concerns are legitimate. The greatest value in the team is simply the familiarity that each party has with the other. The advantage the real estate agent has over the client in making the selection is simply his experience of being involved in so many more transactions than the client, and the chance to see so many problems that could have been avoided with a well chosen team.

Unfortunately, the team concept can be eroded in other ways. The other agent might have her own "team" which works differently.

Also, the team, itself, must work together to keep improving. This takes vigilance and management. The team concept is not a perfect solution, but without the ideal to strive for, we could have nothing more than anarchy to deal with.

So, is it insane to think that real estate agents could make their next transaction a "smooth one?" Could this be the reason why so many real estate agents like golf?

successful than planting. Each species is regulated by a mitigation program approved by the Department of Fish and Game. All of the information collected by the Pebble Beach Company regarding these endangered species is incorporated into a state-wide database run by the Department of Fish and Game to help others trying to restore and protect this type of habitat and its species.

The area of focus for the sand dune endangered species propagation program is at Spanish Bay although efforts are being made from Asilomar to Pescadero Point. There are 8 acres of currently populated remnant dune habitat and 9 more acres of potential habitat which the Pebble Beach Company is hoping to eventually populate.

The remnant dunes are characterized by high quality sands consisting of silica.

Further inland, the sands consist of decomposed granite composed of larger particles which compact too densely for the endangered species root systems to penetrate. On the bright side, the ocean and wind will continue to bring the high quality sand onto the shore, potentially expanding the area of these endangered plant species habitat.

Helping proliferate local plants

The Pebble Beach Company grows native plants and trees not only for its own reforestation and endangered species propagation programs but for donation to local organizations and sale to residents.

were collected. Thus a resident can purchase plants whose seeds were collected within about a 2-mile area.

Between 200 to 800 plants are donated per month to local organizations including the City of Pacific Grove, Monterey History and Art Association, SPCA Wildlife Center, California Department of Parks and Recreation, the Monarch Habitat Restoration Committee and the California Native Plant Society which sells the plants to raise funds. These plants are native understory, shrubs and trees. Endangered plant species are protected under strict regulations and their disbursement is limited.

In an effort to encourage residents to landscape with native plants, the Pebble Beach Company sells native plants to residents at a greatly reduced cost. To prevent hybridization and to preserve the genetic integrity of the native stock, the plants are returned to the area from which the seeds
